[Two students in plant biology talking]

- A. I didn't see you last week in class. We finished our *lab project and handed in our reports on diseased *apple trees.
- B. Yeah. I missed the whole week. I was invited to present a paper at a conference in Vancouver. So I talked with the instructor and arranged to catch up this week. He extended the *deadline for my report.
- A. How did your paper go?
- B. I managed OK but decided not to spend much time indoors. Instead, I walked around the old district and enjoyed the recommended sights, sampled the smoked salmon, and picked up some hand-crafted souvenirs. By the way, would you mind if I borrowed your notes for the classes I skipped?
- A. No problem. I won't need them for a while. The instructor has planned a *field trip for later this week. So classes have been canceled and the lab has been rescheduled.
- B. Thanks.
