[Friends talking]

- A: Hi, Scott.
- B: Hi, Stella. It's good to see you again! I heard you spent spring break in Sweden instead of the Caribbean.
- A: Yeah! I was slow making up my mind. But I finally realized I like snow, skiing and sledding a lot more than I like swaying palm trees, swimming and snorkeling. And I was able to practice the smattering of Swedish I know. How about you?
- B: Well, since my sprained wrist was still in a splint, I couldn't do any sports. So I decided to stay at school instead.
- A: It was probably smart not to strain yourself. But I hope you didn't study all the time.
- B: Of course not! My strategy was to spoil myself. I splurged on snack food, snoozed whenever I wanted to, read some spy novels, played my stereo, took in a small number of videos, and generally relaxed and let my studies slide. I even squeezed in some Scrabble.
- A: Good for you! Now I don't feel so bad for you!

Her condition is stable now.
She's been under a lot of stress.
Let's go skating.
I beat him fair and square.
You scratched yourself.
That's hard to swallow.

There's been a slight change of plans.
That boy is really smart.
Let's have a snack
He didn't speak a word of French.
It's beginning to sprinkle.
She did a splendid job.
